Norwegian Professional Footballers' Association Announces Its Support For Justice For Players, Following Support From Many Other European Players' Unions

Amsterdam, 30 April 2026: Norwegian professional footballers' association (NISO) announced its support for the Justice for Players class action against KNVB, FIFA and several national football associations.

This announcement follows the support from the national players' unions of the Netherlands (VVCS), Belgium (United Athletes), France (UNFP), Austria (VdF), Slovenia (SPINS), Croatia (HUNS), Bosnia and Herzegovina (SPFBIH), North Macedonia (SFM) and Serbia (SPFN), the Czech Republic (ČAFH), Ireland (PFA Ireland), Denmark (Spillerforeningen), Lithuania (PFA Lithuania), Finland (FPA Finland), Spain (Futbolistas ON), Italy (AIC) and Sweden (SFS).

On 4 August 2025, the Dutch foundation Justice for Players (JfP) announced that it is leading a class action against FIFA and several European football associations, on behalf of players who have played in European and UK clubs since 2002: www.justiceforplayers.com.

The primary aim of this class action is to obtain fair financial compensation for all professional players and former players, regardless of their nationality, who have been under contract at some point in their career with a European club including the United Kingdom between 2002 and the present day. This financial compensation is owed based on the CJEU's Diarra ruling (4 October 2024) because the FIFA rules were deemed illegal by the CJEU.

A preliminary analysis by economists at Compass Lexecon has estimated that affected professional football players have earned on average approximately 8% less over the course of their career than they would if the FIFA Regulations had not been unlawfully restrictive.

Furthermore, the class action aims to ensure that FIFA adopts, through genuine dialogue, the governance reforms required by EU law, which include co-decision-making power for players' unions on all matters relating to players' working and employment conditions, in collaboration with the associations representing the clubs.

Kristoffer Vatshaug, President of NISO: "The Diarra ruling raises important questions about how the regulatory framework in football is developed and applied. NISO's support is based on the principle that rules affecting players' working conditions should be consistent with applicable law and developed through proper dialogue with the players and their representatives. In Norway, we experience the dialogue with the federation and clubs as constructive, and it is important to maintain and further develop this dialogue in a way that ensures players have a real and meaningful role in decision-making processes.”

Lucia Melcherts, Chair of Justice for Players, responds: “We welcome NISO’s decision to support the Justice for Players class action. As confirmed by the European Court of Justice, the salaries earned by players across the EU and UK, have been suppressed for years by FIFA’s unlawful transfer rules. This legal action seeks to secure the compensation players are owed for lost earnings and – as importantly - to deliver lasting and meaningful reform of the system.

The endorsement of NISO reflects the growing unity and strength of the players’ movement. Together with the support from many other national players ‘unions, the growing support for this class action sends a clear message that players do no longer accept an unfair and unlawful transfer system.”

JfP is seeking substantive changes to the FIFA transfer rules so that they comply with EU law and reflect European values and principles of free movement. It follows from the Diarra-judgement of the European Court of Justice that all players were harmed as a result of the FIFA transfer rules.

An estimated 100,000 professional football players, men and woman are eligible to join the legal action. For more information, please visit www.justiceforplayers.com.

JfP has instructed Netherlands-based law firm Finch Dispute Resolution, which specializes in class actions in the Netherlands to represent it in the class action. Dupont-Hissel, the law firm that is representing Mr Larssana Diarra, is also advising JfP.

This legal action is fully funded by Deminor, one of Europe’s leading providers of legal finance, so that players will not have to pay to join the legal action or assume the financial risk of this legal action.
